The expected starting date is on January 2020.

The research fellowship is awarded for the purpose of collaboration with the following research programme of the Department of Economics.

Abstract:
The objective is the definition of a monthly macro-econometric model that, receiving in inputs both demand or supply-side shocks, provides scenarios for the main macroeconomic variables (changes in GDP and its components, production, inflation, unemployment). The model, deviating from the traditional ones, must also allow to assessing the impacts of climate changes (temporary and permanent) and mitigation policies, explaining the different ways in which they influence production, raw material prices, and global inflation. The link between extreme weather events, mitigation, and monetary policies must be modeled, given that these supply-side shocks drive production and inflation in opposite directions. In the construction of the model, Lucas’ criticism must be taken into consideration. The model will involve National Accounting variables, which must be transformed from quarterly to monthly frequency in an appropriate way. Some economic indicators, notoriously available late, will be also used, therefore, short-term models must be estimated to address the problem of “ragged-edge data”

The research fellowship amounts to Euro 20.000,00.
