Abstract:

The research focuses on analyzing the role of cultural heritage in driving local socio-economic development, with an emphasis on applying quantitative models and indicators to measure spillover effects in the local cross-border context.

Given the environmental, social, and economic vulnerabilities that characterize many regions within the ITA-CRO program area, there is an urgent need to integrate sustainability into decision-making processes for planning and investment, especially in the tourism sector and the adaptive reuse of fortified cultural heritage. This research aims to enhance decision-support systems by introducing socio-economic indices that can guide policy and investment decisions.

The indices developed through this research will aid public administrations and stakeholders in the tourism and cultural sectors, with specific applications tested within the FORTIC project. More specifically, these indices will serve to: 1) develop econometric models: create models to analyze socio-economic trends and forecast impacts on the region. 2) collect local data and trends: gather data from local communities to ensure the indices accurately reflect on-the-ground realities. 3) manage project activities: coordinate communication, promote research, and facilitate the dissemination of interim and final results to all stakeholders.

The researcher will play an active role in the FORTIC project, dedicating time and resources to accomplish the activities outlined in the project's application form. Additionally, the researcher will serve as a technical expert, responsible for supporting the preparation of deliverables and participating in local initiatives alongside FORTIC project partners to ensure the successful achievement of project objectives

Deadline for submission of applications: by and no later than 2025-01-15, h. 12:00 noon – local time.

WARNING: Please note that the University is closed for the Christmas period from 2024.12.24 to 2025.01.06. We strongly recommend that you DO NOT send applications for participation that must be received during the closing period indicated.
