- scientific coordinators and tutors: Prof. Valerio Dotti

abstract:

The researcher will study the characterization and implementation of an optimal trajectory of public debt across generations, accounting for the constraints due to fiscal rules, the international capital market, the need of ensuring intergenerational support to public policy, and the goal of reducing gender inequality.

Expected products: the researcher will contribute to the development of an overlapping-generation model concerning taxation and public debt, and will use it as a tool to evaluate the ex-ante effectiveness of various public policies, such as fiscal rules and default risk sharing, in pursuing a desirable public debt trajectory.

Who can apply

Prospective candidates are expected to hold a master’s degree in economic or statistical subjects, or related disciplines.
